2. Citations and explanations:

- 1. Claims 1-16, 20, 23-27 lack novelty under PCT Article 33(2) as being anticipated by WO 00/17360 (Weintraub et al., published 30 March 2000). Weintraub et al. teach modified glycoprotein hormones that can be used for imaging cells, treatment for various diseases or detection of analytes that interfere with the binding of the modified glycoprotein hormone and its receptor at p. 3, 2^{md}-3rd paragraphs, pps. 38-45, whole pages, pps. 49-53, whole pages (TSH and TSH-related disorders); pps. 54-61, whole pages (hCG and hCG-related disorders); pps. 61-67 (LH and LH-related disorders); pps. 67-74 under Diagnostic and Therapeutic Uses (FSH and FSH-related Disorders). Note that in US practice, the phrase, "a method of imaging cells", would be treated as a preamble and given little weight for the purpose of prior art if there is no recitation of a method step within the claim.
- 2. Claims 51-75 lack an inventive step under PCT Article 33(3) as being obvious over the prior art as applied in paragraph 1 above and further in view of WO 97/42322 (Szkudlinkski et al., published 13 November 1997). Szkudliniski et al. disclose the claimed modified glycoprotein hormones as well as assays for determining glycoprotein hormone activity and binding. In addition, Weintraub et al. disclose that the recited hormones could be used for diagnosis.
- 3. Claims 28-50 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a fusion or chimeric protein consisting of a modified glycoprotein hormone having at least one mutation and the drugs recited in claims 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, or 49.
- 4. Claims 1-75 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(4), and thus have industrial applicability because the subject matter claimed can be made or used in industry.
